Iodine Number. --The relative content of saturated and unsaturated fatty acids in fats is determined by the capacity of the fats to absorb iodine. As an example of the determination of this value, the Hub! method will be described: (1) A standard solution of iodine containing 25 grams of iodine and 30 grams of mercuric chloride dissolved in 500 c. c. of alcohol, free from fusel oil. (2) A solution of sodium thiosulphate containing 24 grams of the salt per liter. This solution is standardized by determining the number of milligrams of iodine which is reduced by a cubic centimeter of the solution. The sample of fat, . 3 to . 4 gram of olein-rich fats or . 8 to 1 gram of solid fats, is weighed into a glass stoppered bottle and dissolved in 15-25 c. c. of chloroform. It is then heated with 25 c. c. of the iodine solution. After 6 to 10 hours 20 c. c. of a 10 potassium iodide solution is added, the whole diluted with water, and the unabsorbed iodine is titrated by means of the sodium thiosulphate solution. The KI is added to prevent the separation of iodine in the solid state on dilution with water. The following values illustrate the iodine values for several kinds of fats: Iodine Numbers Puke Fats Olein Linolein Linolenin 86. 2 173. 6 262. 2 Reichert-Meissl Number (Volatile fatty acid number). --It has already been stated that certain fats contain much larger...
