Hicks, 2 Y. and C. 472). To meet this case, it will be prudent to have a covenant in the licence, under which the parties may re-adjust their accounts in the event of the patent proving void or voidable. When a patent is granted to two or more persons, each may use the invention without being liable to account to the other (Mathers v. Queen, 1 Law Rep. Ch. Ap. 29, before Lord Cranworth, C). See, however, the earlier case of Hancock v. Bewley (Johns. 601), as to the rights of parties where letters patent are vested in trustees for two or more persons as tenants in Common. The assignee of part of a patent separate from other parts may bring his action for an infringement of such part without joining as plaintiffs those persons who have distinct interests in the other parts, but have no interest in the damages sought to be recovered. (Dunnicliff v. Mallei, 7 C. B. N. S. 209.) This decision was mentioned with approval by the Court when delivering judgment in the case of Walton v. Lavater (8 C. B. N. s. 184), where it was unsuccessfully contended that the assignee of two several moieties of a patent had not a sufficient legal interest to sue for its infringement. A simple licence,...
